SNOWS SUPPLIES IRRIGATION

INDIANS STILL MEASURE AGES
BY "SNOWS" AND "MOONS."

Census Takers Attribute Ripening of Crops to Fact That Sun Shines
During Certain Periods.

HOW FARMS RUN IN ALASKA

Washington, Aug. 5.—Farming by sub-irrigation and with the moisture supplied by melting ice is a novel agricultural method adopted in the interior of Alaska, according to the official report of Chief Special Agent McKenzie, who supervised the taking of the recent census in the Fourth district of that territory. The system is proving surprisingly successful. Many kinds of vegetables are being grown, thus rendering living conditions more tolerable in the far northern country. The future is most promising in this respect, believes Mr. McKenzie.

Not only enumerating the population, but gathering statistics on agricultural, mining and manufacturing conditions was the work of Mr. McKenzie. All the concrete facts will be given in figures which will be given out later. The census agent's remarks regarding the farming operations are most interesting. He says that some homesteads have been taken up and that on them farming is conducted on a considerable scale.

Agriculture in Infancy.
"Agriculture in this portion of Alaska is yet in its infancy," says Mr. McKenzie, "but it has arrived at such proportions as to be considered almost wonderful in its results. If all the returns are taken, they will show a very remarkable condition when it is considered that it is a condition existing within the arctic circle."

All the growth is attained between May 20 and September 15. He attributes the fact that crops ripen not only to the fact that the sun shines from 16 to 24 hours per day, but to the correlative fact that the plants are supplied with moisture from beneath where the melting ice affords a regular and constant supply.

"Rain is practically unknown," he says, "but the necessary moisture comes from below." The thaw never extends deeper than three feet, and will not farther than fifteen inches, but the thaw is regular and the water supply sufficient to force a rapid growth.

Measure Ages By Snows.
Celery, lettuce, radishes, cabbages, turnips and potatoes thrive, and Mr. McKenzie declares, they are so much better than "the states" that the high price charged by the growers is quite justifiable. Raspberries grow to be as large around as 25-cent pieces, and blackberries and cranberries grow wild in great profusion. Experiments have been made with strawberries and grain, and while no great success is recorded, the outlook is encouraging.

Chief Census Agent McKenzie gives assurance that the Indians do measure time by the "snows" and "suns" and distances by "sleeps." Indeed, he asserts that they have no other standards of time or of measurement, and in relating the fact he cites an instance which throws a little light on the difficulties of enumerating the red men.

"Only the very young children, who have been educated in the government schools," he says, "have any knowledge of their ages or births, and the agents were instructed to use the age and birth months as nearly as talk and observation would seem correct. Time with them is computed on suns and snows, and distances by sleeps. Marriages, separations, births and deaths are all based upon such calculations, and we were obliged to base our information in the same way."

He then gives this instance: "An Indian buck claimed to have lived '200 snows.' After much talk and use of the sign language it was determined that he was about 80 years old. He was found to have been 20 snows old when he 'got his first woman,' to have kept her 'four snows, when she got away,' that he 'got more woman and keep her five snows and she die,' that he 'got no woman for 20 snows more,' and finally that he 'got young chicken and keep her all time ever since, now, on 25 or 30 snows.'"

That there were other difficulties in getting the facts regarding the aborigines is indicated by the following from the report:

"Many of the Indians know a sufficient number of English words to do business with a white man, but when it was determined that they were to be counted they had a faculty for closing their mouths and knowing nothing until an interpreter impressed upon them the fact that the agent came from the Great White Father at Washington."

Considerate.

At the time of King Edward's funeral a large crowd was assembled near Victoria Station as King George was driving by to meet the kaiser. "Take off yer hat, Johnny," said a British workman to his small son, "for this is the new king a-comin' an' I wouldn't like 'im to think 'e wasn't wanted."—Success Magazine.

Widow Native of Louisville.

Paris, Aug. 4.—The identity of the American who committed suicide in the Seine July 29 and whose body was recovered Sunday, has been established. He was William Starin, a lawyer of Chicago, who had lived in Turin for the last two years. Mr. Starin suffered from neurasthenia and insomnia and often had threatened to commit suicide.

On Friday night last he let himself down from the fifth story to the street by dropping from balcony to balcony. He ran through the streets in his night clothes to the Grenelle bridge and jumped from it into the Seine.

The funeral was held today. Mrs. Starin is a native of Louisville, Ky.

Lover Landed in Pen.

New York, Aug. 5.—John J. Sammack, 20 years old, was yesterday convicted in the court of special sessions in Brooklyn of sending a threatening letter to Sophie Konzans, of 406 1/2 Thirtieth street, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the penitentiary. He had been paying court to the girl for some time, and when she broke with him on account of his attentions to another girl, he sent her a letter threatening to do her serious injury if she did not elope with him.

It isn't the scene shifter's faith that enables him to move mountains.

I heard of your Sage and Sulphur hair remedy, got a bottle and used it, and almost at once was benefited by it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable.
